Jonathan is a paediatric hepatologist at King's College Hospital in London. He developed and leads the intestinal rehabilitation and transplant service there, having gained experience in Birmingham and Pittsburgh; and linking with Great Ormond Street Hospital.

His interest in technology and new ways of working led him to develop a remote monitoring solution in conjunction with his intestinal failure and transplant patients, many of whom live far from King's.

Jonathan also has leadership roles as the Clinical Director of the children's hospital at King's, and internationally as the President-Elect of the Intestinal Rehabilitation and Transplant Association.
